For the Love of Words: A Linux Text Editor, even on iPhone - alphadoggs ===== dang Discussed at the time: [----- Anm1 Can we get a landing page with a link to the OS X and Windows version? I don't know much about text editors, but I think many people in that niche would be interested in seeing screenshots and/or a list of text editors they can use on Linux. ~~~ nthcolumn Unrelated to the discussion, but just a plug for the GEdit editor. Even on Windows, at the time of writing, GEdit is the only editor to have the same stable API and can be made into something like a 'complete' workstation (ubuntu-ish) on Windows. If you cannot find what you want, as in an intuitive keyboard interface (so much wasted keyboard skill at startup if this is not there), then you can literally drag and drop a file or directory into Gedit and it will finish what needs doing. I had to put up with Textadept for a long time, the latest version was too buggy for my needs. ~~~ dontstartup Github page: [~~~ nthcolumn True, now that I have GEdit available on Windows I use it. But I can't remember the last time that I could not do a file edit on a wubi install. The home page is also less than informative. ----- jimmywanger The impetus to this article is that Light Table/Eclipse get a new release every few months. Unfortunately, it's hard to push editors back since the people who use them are a tiny niche, and not a growing one. ~~~ ianbicking I use Atom for almost all of my editing needs on Linux and Windows. There are plenty of pretty good text editors that run natively on Linux.

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.0)?

What Happens if I Don't Pay my One Time Filing Fees? I filled out my paperwork in April and was told my filing fees were due in August. I called the day before my deadline to see if there was any possible way I could make it work. There are two options available to you if you fail to pay your federal filing fees by the deadline. The first one, which I will call the "off the hook" option, is to ask your tax preparer to extend the deadline by filing an extension form. The second option, which I will call the "compromise" option, is to pay the fees now and keep the money. I don't like either option. The "off the hook" option is a waste of my time. I don't want to have to pay more money so that I don't have to follow a proper filing process. The "compromise" option, on the other hand, is not only a waste of time but also violates all of my ethical, moral, and legal principles. Yes, I agree with you. Doing anything unethical is a violation of my personal ethics. It is a waste of my time and an opportunity to teach my clients a valuable lesson. Unfortunately, I was given no choice. The IRS is very specific when it comes to the deadlines for filing. A tax preparer cannot extend the deadline. The preparer also cannot accept a late filing. I would have preferred to pay the $300 now and then have the tax preparer complete my filing. If I needed any additional forms, I would have scheduled a meeting with my preparer to go over and review my work. I had no choice but to do one of two things. The first option was to pay the tax preparer to file the extension. The second option was to pay the tax preparer to do nothing. Both of these options are a violation of my principles and morals. With that being said, I won't be doing any one of these options. The taxes weren't important enough for me to risk my time and money. I want to thank you for taking the time to read this article. If you would like to learn more about the options available to you, you can check out the link to the IRS.gov page right here: What Happ
