Grammar Explorer 3 Student Book by Paul Carne Paperback January 1, 1706 3.4 out of 5 stars 3 ratings.[Investigations on the development of immunity to a secondary Schistosoma mansoni infection (I). Genetic control of host resistance in mice]. The nature of resistance and/or susceptibility of inbred strains of mice to Schistosoma mansoni infection has been compared with that of their F1 hybrids and recombinant inbred strains. The behaviour of three inbred strains C57BL/6J, BALB/c and NIH/Swiss have been evaluated after experimentally induced and natural infections. Our results prove that in C57BL/6J mice the resistance to cercarial penetration is controlled primarily by non-host factors, whilst the intensity of the development of the ensuing egg-granuloma is determined by the host. BALB/c mice are extremely susceptible to infection, irrespective of e79caf774b
