To fully exploit the concept of the game, we decided to let you design your character, like an RPG in which the story is told through a plurality of characters. We took the feedback received from the Alpha test and added the features that the players felt were missing, such as new weapon skills, skill slots, difficulty settings, and greater fineness of detail in the appearance of your character. The Beta testing period has taken a very long time. We apologize for that. However, we are confident that we have created a game that will make you feel the emotion of having crafted your own hero. We are truly looking forward to your feedback as we continue to work on the game. Thank you, and we hope you enjoy the game. ◆ PERSONAL

TRIGGER is known for its work on manga such as Steins;Gate and high-quality animation, as well as the work on the online game, Cowboy Bebop: The Role-Playing Game. Together, TRIGGER and Alchemist developed a game that was born from a desire to realize a fantasy action RPG game set in a fantasy setting. TRIGGER is developing the game based on the character designs by HYOGI. The game world was created with the assistance of novelist RAISEN. The character designs were provided by illustrator RE:Birth. □ Establish the Players' Relationships In Tarnished, you take the role as a Dungeon Master (DM) which acts as a guardian of

Story highlights 10 women have been killed in the Rio Grande, family says United Nations says it will investigate extrajudicial killings Corps of Engineers say water is flowing downstream The Rio Grande, the river that bisects South and Central America, flows into Mexico through the U.S. and becomes a muddy pool of gloom and despair. The river has been painted a deep blue and green because of enormous cornfields and tobacco fields that line the banks of its meandering way. Thousands of people have died and been displaced by floods and poor planning by the government. But some recent news stories may illuminate the harsh dimensions of that infamous river. Ten women were killed in the Rio Grande during the first weekend of December, a fact that baffled local authorities, relatives and international human rights organizations, including the United Nations. The agency that controls the river, the

U.S. Department of the Army, said it had done no such thing. CORPS OF ENGINEERS SAYS DROUGHT LEADS TO DELUGE IN MEXICO "There was no body count, no announcement of a body count of any kind," said Steve Earley, chief spokesman for the Corps of Engineers, as he sat in a conference room at the agency's headquarters in Virginia. Earley said the agency received a call from the press office at the Geneva-based United Nations and immediately began looking into the matter. The United Nations announced Thursday that it will launch an investigation of possible extrajudicial killings of some 70 people who may have been victims of "inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment" by Mexican officials. The agency, which monitors human rights violations in Mexico, said that 10 women were killed in the first week of the month on the U.S. side of the river. The wife of a U.S. Border Patrol agent was one of them. Wallace Ortiz, a 64-year-old rancher who owns several cattle ranches near McAllen, Texas, said that on Sunday his 14-year-old son saw some Mexican women on a dirt road near a fenced-in area. They were dead. EARLEY ADDRESSES BORDER CRISIS IN NEWSPEECH "He said, 'What was that?'" Ortiz said in Spanish. Ortiz said that his son saw two bodies at the fenced-in area and then learned that five more were
