One is production branch and other is new code repository. I have custom git commands in bash to push production and new code repository to github.com. I have copied some SQL dumps in production/sql directory. Now, I need to use this SQL dump on new code repository. How can I do this? A: You can simply check out the branch where your sql dump is. From your cloned repository $ git checkout new-branch-name Then in that branch find the sql dump folder and copy that to wherever you want, run it, then commit and push. It is important that you run your sql dump from the branch that you copied the dump from so that you don't overwrite what you need. require 'test_helper' class AddressTest "Foo") end def test_to_param_with_as_parameter assert_equal "", @address.to_param(:as => :string, :string => "Foo") end def test_to_param_with_as_parameter_and_documentation assert_equal "Foo", @address.to_param(:as => :string, :documentation => 'Foo') end def test_to_param_with_as_parameter_and_label assert_equal "Foo", @address.to_param(:as => :string, :label => 'Foo') end def test_to_param_with_as_parameter_and
