Kawasaki Disease Kawasaki Disease is a very common acute vasculitis in children. It is the most common cause of acquired heart disease in children. Each year in the US there are about 4000 cases of Kawasaki Disease which involve about 0.1% of the population. The disease usually occurs between the ages of 6 months and 4 years. Presentation It presents with a varied clinical spectrum, ranging from mild infection to the most severe form of the illness, Kawasaki Syndrome. The first signs of the disease may start to appear anywhere from 2 to 6 weeks after exposure to a respiratory infection. It may be missed if not suspected by the doctor. The most common features of the disease are high fever, irritability, tender red areas on the hands and feet and redness of the eyes. Other presentations may include sore throat, rash, muscle aches, vomiting, irritability and diarrhea. Additional signs and symptoms are present in the children with shock, bruising or red eyes, high heart rate and loss of appetite. Children with moderate form of the disease may have painful stiff joints especially in the morning.
